

The Daily Gazetteer.

MONDAY, APRIL 18. 1737.

91. 565.

The Ship-News which hitherto has been inserted in the DAILY JOURNAL, will for the future be continued in this Paper.

HE Letters from Spain and Portugal say, that on the 20th ult. N. S. The Domesticks of the Portuguese Minister at Madrid, and those of the Spanish Ambassador at Lisbon, who were imprisoned on Account of the Difference between the two Courts, were set at Liberty, in pursuance of the Accommodation concluded between the two Crowns, by the Interposition of the Mediatorial Powers. The King of Spain has appointed Don Bernardino de Mirimon, a Major General, to be his Ambassador at Lisbon: And the King of Portugal has nominated the Count Tarauca, who resides at Vienna, to go with that Character to Madrid.

According to the Advices from Paris, there are various Reports and Conjectures relating to M. Chauvelin. Some Persons say, he will shortly have Leave from the King to come, and reside again in Paris, and the Lord L——, a young English Nobleman, has laid a Wager of 500 Guineas with the Count de R——, that M. Chauvelin will be restor'd to the Ministry before the End of this Year.

The Letters add, that on the 1st Instant died at Paris, aged 74, Dr. Hecquet, who was formerly Professor and Dean of the Faculty at Paris, but had left off Practice for ten Years, and was retired among the Carmelites, to prepare for his latter End. He had not eat any Meat nor drank any Wine for 30 Years past.

There are Letters from Amsterdam, which say positively, that the Baron de Neuhooff is in that City, trafficking in the Disguise of a Merchant, and that he has offered Money for a considerable Quantity of Fire-Arms. He happened to be known by some Persons who had seen him there formerly.

The Primate of Poland, who is near Four-score Years of Age, is so dangerously ill, that Publick Prayers are ordered for him in several Parts of that Kingdom. Tho' the Lesser Poland does not suffer so much for want of Provisions as Great Poland does, yet 'tis said to be in imminent Danger from the Plague with which some Places in Besserabia and Moldavia are infected.

Letters from Germany say, That the Duke of Wirtemberg-Neustad, Administrator of the Duchy of Wirtemberg, who is of the Lutheran Religion, has appointed the Count de Nostitz, who is of the same Religion, to be the young Duke's Governour. The Duchess Dowager has sent one of her Privy-Council to Vienna, to desire the Emperor to maintain the Clauses of the late Duke's Will. Suss the Jew, and his Adherents, are persecuted with Vigour. He has undergone several Interrogatories, but refuses to own any of the Facts laid to his Charge. In Order to extort a Confession from him by severe Methods, he was put into a Dungeon for Eight Days, where he had nothing but Straw to lye upon, and no Nourishment but Bread and Water; but he persisted in his Denial of the Facts, and said, it seems, That the greatest Crime he thought they could fasten upon him, was his being a Jew; his having possess'd the Favour and Confidence of the late Duke; and his having got Money in his Service. He pretends to have done this honestly; which is the very Thing in Dispute: And it has been resolv'd to put some of the Prisoners in Custody for that Affair to the Torture.

They write from Vienna, That the Emperor has resolv'd to put that Project in Execution, which was propos'd to him in the last War, for preventing the Abuses owing to the little Care that is taken of the young Nobility of Austria, in their Travels to Foreign Countries: Which is the rather mention'd here, because it may serve as a Lesson for the Gentry of our own Nation. It has been observ'd to the Emperor, That many young Gentlemen, instead of having their Heads and Hearts rightly form'd, suffer themselves to be perverted by the bad Examples of others, and spend most of their Time in Debauchery and Prodigality; which engage them in vast Expence, and expose them to fatal Consequences. The Reason of this Abuse is suppos'd to be chiefly owing to the Permission given to the young Nobility, of travelling too soon in Life, and at an Age when, for Want of a Capacity of making the necessary Reflections, they abandon themselves blindly to their Passions. The little Care too taken of the Choice of their Governours, who are commonly Old Servants, or Pedants, as void of Sense as of Manners, is another Thing which the Imperial Court is resolv'd to remedy. Therefore hereafter, when any young Noblemen or Gentlemen have a Mind to travel, their Parents will be oblig'd to ask the Emperor's Leave; which his Imperial Majesty will not grant, till he has been inform'd that the young Gentlemen have finish'd their Studies, and that their Parents are in a Condition to support the Expences of their Travels. The Emperor, moreover, will take Care to appoint a Governor, or some other proper Person, to look after them, and to see that they acquire the Advantage that is necessary from their Knowledge of Foreign Countries. The Emperor designs also to give them Letters of Recommendation to his Ministers in those Countries, that they may apply to them upon proper Occasions. By Regulations so well becoming the Wisdom of his Imperial Majesty, he will have the Satisfaction to see the young Nobility better form'd, and more capable to fill the Employments for which they are born. The Parents will also have the Satisfaction to see that their Children are improv'd by their Travels in Foreign Countries; and that they have brought home something else with them, besides the Mimicry of Foreign Airs, and an Affected Behaviour. The Tenderness of a Parent will likewise be particularly oblig'd for these Regulations; because the Care that will be taken by the Emperor, to put good Governors over the Youth, will prevent the latter from wasting their Substance in Debauchery, and exposing their Persons to the Diseases, and the other Dangers, which too often deprive them of the Opportunity of seeing those Families again, to which they were once so dear.

The Army with which the Czarina proposes to act offensively against the Turks, is computed at 220000, including the Cossacks, and those Tartars that are her Tributaries.

The Drought, notwithstanding all Prayers, Processions, &c. continues in Spain; and in many Parts of Great Poland there's a Famine; insomuch that at Proske, a Place near Rosenberg, on the Frontiers of Silesia, a Woman had her Head cut off, who was so hunger-starv'd, that she kill'd and eat her own Infant. A Peasant and his Family was also taken up, for having likewise kill'd, and then consum'd the Flesh of two Small Children, and of a third, who was twelve Years old. To this is tack'd a remarkable Circumstance, viz. That the Son of the Peasant having promis'd a young Woman Marriage, and being press'd with Hunger, his Sweetheart, in Order for his and the Family's Sustainance, sold all that she had in the World; but when all was spent, the Man knock'd her down, cut her Throat, and then he and the Family made a Meal of her: But it making them all sick, they kill'd a Dog, roasted, and then eat it, which restor'd them to their Health. 'Tis added, That they have confess'd all these black Crimes, and that they are speedily to suffer the Punishment they deserve, if any can be found out bad enough.

There's an Account in Town, that a large Gally, commanded by Moses Davis, bound from Waterford to Leghorn, was lost to the Southward of Lisbon. 'Tis said that the Cargo, which was insured and valued at 3000 l. was lost, but the Hands got all on Shore.
